

Megan Chiusaroli's Bio

Megan Chiusaroli started her teaching career as a Fulbright English Teaching Assistant in Rome, Italy in 2007. Since then she has taught ESL in various universities in New York, including Columbia University, New York University and Stony Brook University. She has a B.A. in Literature from Pace University and an M.A. in TESOL from Stony Brook University. Her special interests include flipped classroom strategies, and integrating literature and poetry into the English language curriculum. She will be teaching Oral Communication Skills and Listening and Pronunciation courses at Gazi University in the English Language Training Department as an English Language Fellow (ELF) funded by the U.S. Department of State.